Abstract(EN): One of a take back program goals is to preserve the environment. Participation of the consumers in a take back program will succeed the collection process as the first step in reverse logistics. This research studied the intention of consumers, especially university students to participate in the mobile phone take-back program based on the influence of their environmental value and attitude, using structural equation modeling. The survey was conducted on 184 university students in Indonesia. The results showed that the environmental value had positive and significant effect on the environmental attitude, but the environmental attitudes did not have significant effect on the student's intention to participate in the mobile phone take back program. These results can be used as a reference for mobile phone companies to implement a suitable take back program especially for university students.

Dear Siti Mahsanah Budijati

We would like to take this opportunity to thank you for your full paper submission and your interest to participate in our 6th KKU International Engineering Conference.

We are pleased to inform you that your proposed full paper as listed below (ID# 188) has been accepted to publish in our supporting journals of The 6th KKU International Engineering Conference 2016. However, the reviewers have indicated that the full paper is not acceptable in its present form. Please see their comments below.

"The influence of environmental value and attitude on student's intention to participate in a take back program"

Reviewer A:

The objectives and the methodology are well written. However, the review of literature, which is a part of the introduction, needs an improvement. You reviewed a lot of relevant research papers by only giving overviews of what the researchers did, such as the objectives and the participants of their studies, without concluding the results from these studies or significant points which could be linked to your own work. Moreover, limitations of the reviewed papers were not stated. You do not need to describe these points for every paper that you have mentioned. You may provide only a summary or the big picture of the previous studies. This is similar to the lines 96-98. However, I think only concluding that a study of people behaviour concerning the take back program is still a gap of the research is not adequate. From this, it looks like you did the review of literature only to prove that your research is original. The true mean of the literature review is beyond that. You need to show what you have learned from the previous studies.

In terms of the pilot study with 70 respondents, please clarify whether responses from these 70 people were also included in the 184 respondents or not.

Please provide the meanings of the term 'reliability' and 'validity' in order to allow readers to understand the points that you have tested.

For lines 179-190, you should provide a discussion regarding why your finding is consistent with some previous works but supports some others. Only stating that the findings are consistent or in contrast with some others without providing any reasons is inadequate. For example, you may provide a discussion by linking to different countries or cultures.

Reviewer B:

- 1. There are too many grammatical errors. The author(s) should correct writing mistakes.*
- 2. The author(s) should provide more detailed conclusions and research findings.*

 NOTE  The revision of the article, please highlight the text has changed.

We invite you to revise and resubmit your full paper Within June 03, 2016, addressing carefully the issues raised in the comments and highlighting all modifications in the manuscript. All changes and explanations to every comment from the reviewers must be included at the end of revised manuscript in the section entitled "Authors' Responses".

Once again, the conference committee thanks for your interest in The 6th KKU International Engineering Conference 2016 and look forward to seeing you in Khon Kaen in August 3-5, 2016.

Yours sincerely,
The Secretariat of KKU-IENC2016, Faculty of Engineering, Khon Kaen University.
