Keywords: post consumption behavior, mobile phone, Indonesia, reverse logistics

Abstract: Study of consumers' post consumption behaviour is important to get an explanation of consumers' behaviour. This information is needed to design appropriate reverse logistics activities. This study conducted on mobile phone users in Indonesia, to collect the data of consumers' post consumption behaviour for mobile phone. From 346 respondents, there were three post consumption behaviour identified, namely: sell to second-hand market, storage/ donated to others, and direct discarding, there was no consumer who answered return to a take back program. The study showed that the behaviour with highest frequency distribution was storage/ donated to others. Homogeneity tests showed the differences in proportion of storage/ donated to others and direct discarding based on gender, as well as the differences in proportion of direct discarding based on income. Independent test found that there was no relationship between demographic backgrounds with the choices of post consumption behaviour.

Dear Siti Mahsanah Budijati,

On behalf of the Organizing Committee, we would like to express my appreciation for your dedicated participation on the International Conference on Industrial Engineering, Management Science and Applications (ICIMSA2015) which was held at Morito Memorial Hall, Tokyo University of Science, Japan on May 26th to 28th, 2015.

We hope that everyone returned home safe and would like to thank you all for your great participation during the conference.

The Conference was an overwhelming success, attracting 115 delegates, speakers and sponsors from 22 countries and provided great intellectual and social interaction for the participants.

Without your support, the conference would not have been the success that it was. We trust that you found your involvement in the conference both valuable and rewarding.
