1. Introduction

In learning English there are four skills that need to be mastered by students, including: reading, writing, listening and speaking. This also applies to the English process, namely listening and reading as receptive skills while reading and speaking as productive skills. Often people call it mastering speaking, written language is also important to master. For example, when we access the internet and want to reply to a message related to English, of course we need careful reading skills and the ability to write in the right language to give the right answer.

One of the main skills in learning English is reading skill. It is the main result of language input and is needed to improve other language skills such as speaking and writing. Reading is one of the four skills in learning English. through reading, they can get a lot of information, increase their knowledge, and students will know how to read English texts effectively. It takes a high level of understanding to read, students must understand the content of the reading text. Based on curriculum 13, students must master the four English skills in order to apply these skills in real life to interact with their environment. Besides that, English is also one of the subjects tested in the national final exam where most of the items are reading comprehension tests.

Reading is an activity to get information about something. It is very important for teachers to improve their students' English skills. The main purpose of teaching English in junior high and high school is to improve reading comprehension, and students who graduate from high school must have good reading comprehension. According to (Mubarok, n.d.) stated that in teaching reading, English teachers must apply good and appropriate strategies that can be a stimulus so that students become active and can participate in the teaching and learning process. There are so many strategies in teaching reading but they must be adapted to the conditions and learning environment of students. In a literate society, most normal children learn to read by the age of five or six, and some even earlier.

Since English in Indonesia is a foreign language, it is possible that students who are just starting out in learning English may have difficulty understanding reading texts, perhaps due to incorrect word identification and recognition, specifically limited comprehension skills, or poor oral reading. Therefore, the researcher wanted to identify students' perceptions of difficulties in developing reading skills as a first step to finding the right learning strategies.

Perception is the process of human thinking about a phenomenon after they get a sensation from the surrounding environment as well as the process of receiving, distinguishing, and giving meaning to the stimuli received by the senses. So that it can provide conclusions and interpretations of certain objects that are observed. Perception means the process of observing a person's environment using his five senses, so that he will be aware of everything that is in his environment. According to Asrori (2009), which states that perception is an individual's process of interpreting, organizing and giving meaning to stimulate that comes from the environment of individual beings, which results from the learning process and experience. Thus, the perception is derived from our experience that it is stimulated by the mind. Meanwhile, according to Slameto (2010), perception is a process related to the entry of messages and information into the human brain. Which means perception is recognition that is achieved by exchanging messages or information with others through friendship or perhaps through experienced talking to each other. On the other hand, according to Devito (2011) perception is the process of becoming aware of many stimuli that affect our senses. which means that perception is an event in consciousness that can be influenced by the five human senses through human relationships between people. Therefore, this is obtained from the surrounding environment, friends around and also from events that are still up to now. It can be concluded based on the understanding of experts who argue above that perception is a human thought or idea based on what is obtained from the environment of living things and experiences that have been experienced before.

In teaching English, the teachers should be able to manage the classroom well. The teacher should be creative and manage the classroom with interesting technique as (Brown 1994) states, teaching is showing or helping student to learn how to do something, giving instructions in the study of something, providing with language, and causing to know or understand. It means that teacher have to make the students feel comfort and interest in studying subject especially English by using a creative technique so the students will focus on learning process. In teaching, especially teaching English, teacher should prepare the concept of teaching as well as possible and he or she is demanded to create the fun learning, because some students blame that English is most difficult subject. Fun learning will increase students' motivation to learn English as much as possible.

Reading is one of the basic skills in language learning. It is impossible to separate from other language learning skills besides writing, namely speaking and listening. Those skills must all be learned with the learner's English. Reading skills can help improve other language skills. Generally, reading skills develop in a society with a literary taste, because it can lead to developing understanding, enriching vocabulary. According to Elizabeth (as cited in Irawan 2010), reading is the process of constructing meaning from print and from others symbol. Reading involves not just the print and the illustrations, but also readers bringing to the process their knowledge of the world and their past experiences.

In this study, there are three previous studies that have little in common. Three previous studies investigated students' reading problems. The first study conducted by (Saraswati et al., 2021) "An Analysis of Student Reading Comprehension Difficulties of Eight Grade Student" they conducted a study that aimed to determine the reading comprehension difficulties of eighth grade students in one of the junior high schools in Tegallalang. The difference between the research above and this study is that the number of participants in previous studies was more than this study, and the use of techniques used in previous studies used quantitative research techniques. The second study was conducted (Sari et al., 2020) "Student's Perception on Reading Comprehension Problem in Narrative text", in this study participants were randomly selected from class X SMAN 2 Jember. The research design used is survey research with data collection instruments using questionnaires which are divided into 2 parts. Which in the first part contains personal information and in the second part is a questionnaire consisting of 20 items written in Indonesian to avoid misunderstandings among students. The difference between the research above and this research is the research method in which the research above uses a survey research design using a questionnaire which is divided into 2 parts, while this study uses a qualitative descriptive method using questionnaires and interviews. The third study was conducted by (Safura & Helmanda, 2020) "The Analysis of English Department Students' Difficulties in Mastering Reading Text at Muhammadiyah Aceh University". The purpose of his research is to analyze the difficulties faced by students in mastering reading texts, especially finding and understanding the main ideas. The difference between the research above and this research is the research method in which the above research uses the theory of random sampling technique to select participants by distributing 2 types of questionnaires, namely open and closed, while this study selects participants randomly and uses questionnaires as an instrument to strengthen the results of interview data.

The research instrument consisted of a series of questions with the aim of collecting information from respondents. In this study analyzing data using data reduction techniques, data presentation, and drawing conclusions and verification.

3.9. Strategies Used by Students' SMP Negeri 1 Bungku in Overcoming Difficulties in Reading English Texts

Figure 9. Strategies Used by Students' SMP Negeri 1 Bungku in Overcoming Difficulties in Reading English Texts

Based on Figure 9, it can be seen that the results of the questionnaire showed 46.7% of respondents' opinions answered agree and strongly agree regarding students having strategies in reading English texts. In the interview session with students, the researcher asked according to the interview question; can you explain what strategies do you use to deal with difficulties in English reading texts? according to the opinion of the students who agreed as the informant NH said that “dengan cara membaca secara efektif. Kemudian setelah membaca, mencatat poin poin penting dan biasanya saya mencatat di note atau dibukit tulis apabila saya menemukan kosa kata yang baru” [by reading effectively. Based on the results of the study, that students have a perception about the difficulty of reading English. In the interview session students are more difficult to pronounce each word or sentence where students often find writing different words with the way the word is pronounced. Difficulty in determining the subject matter is also one of the important difficulties in English texts for students. In addition, students' difficulties in reading English texts are influenced by sentence patterns that are relatively difficult to understand, such as in today's modern era, English sentences on average use idiom sentences whose meaning is very much different from the real meaning.

Based on a previous study conducted by (Saraswati et al., 2021) showing the same research results with the results of this study that some students have a perception of difficulty in reading English texts because students have difficulty in pronouncing vocabulary and determining the main ideas or main ideas implied from the reading text. It can be interpreted that foreign words continue to be a problem because students tend to have little English vocabulary, and although they feel they read better, their vocabulary skills do not seem to improve therefore it is not enough to understand the context of the word.

In addition, students' difficulties are also influenced by the experience and interest of students in learning, especially in reading English texts where interest is an important part of the learning process. Based on (Rachman, 2018) students who are interested in learning English scored well on reading comprehension tests. Students have curiosity about analytical topics, information analysis techniques in deep thinking related techniques, and deep processes, thus helping them to have higher text recognition.

4. Conclusion

It can be concluded that students' perceptions of the difficulties that are usually faced in reading English texts include students having difficulty understanding reading characteristics that are different from other language skills, determining sentence patterns, and understanding new words. The difficulty is also caused by the lack of motivation from the teacher to improve students' reading skills and the lack of vocabulary and pronunciation of students.
