TBLT in SLA theories and research

Swain's 1995 Input –Interaction –Output

- Learners are exposed to meaningfu input
- Opportunities for meaningful production
- Integration of lingusitic knowledge and communicative skills in task design
- Possibilities to pre-teach language form .The teacher draws learners 'attention to a particular aspect of language data (point of noticing) —as in natural LL ,
- Post task 'focus on form' (e.g Long, 1998)

Components of Tasks

The definition of a language learning task requires specification of four components: the goals, the input (linguistic or otherwise), the activities derived from this input, and finally the roles implied for teacher and learners (Nunan 1989, p. 47).

Some Pros and Cons of Task Based Language Teaching

Pros Cons

Enjoyment

Active learning

Opportunities for integrated skills

Dealing with both process and product

Contextualized language learning

The use of L1 in a monolingual class

Less direct support from the teacher

Teachers authority

Less room for error correction

Fossilization

Accuracy 'focus on form'

Group work is a waste of time

Some learners prefered formal, structured learning

Strong or extroverted learners dominate

Some Issues with TBL in EFL contexts:

- ☐ Learning styles, and logistic support (Chowdury, 2003)
- ☐ Fluency at the expense of accuracy (Richards, 2001)
- ☐ Ss more concerned with task completion than engage in language-rich interaction

Why regulating control and freedom?

- Suit a varying degree of learners need for scaffolding
- Balance between form and meaning,
- Language rich interaction and task –completion
- Contrived and predetermined language use and creativity in language use

How can we do it?:

- Goal
- Input
- Activities
- Role

An example of too well-defined task

Type : Pair Work

Level: A2-B1

Constraint

Teacher Instruction: Telephone your partner to organize a night out and find a time which suits you both.

	Student A
Thu	Swimming lesson 4. pm
Fri	Piano lesson 2-4 pm Control
Sat	Book store visit 7 pm
Sun	Car free day – Bike ride 6 am- 12 am

	Student B
Thu	Visit Library, 2 – 5 pm Control
Fri	Practice football 3 – 5 pm
Sat	English Club 3 pm
Sun	Car Freeday –Bike ride 6.am -12.am

Too much control

Contrived use of language

Less creativity

Predictability

Less time spent on speaking

An example of too loosely-defined task

Type : Pair Work

Level: A2-B1

Freedom

Teacher Instruction: Fill in the diary with your plans in the coming 4 days and invite your partner to join you

	Student A
Thu
Fri	Freedom
Sat
Sun

	Student B
Th
Fr	Freedom
Sat
Sun

Too much freedom

☐ Incompatible with students learning style
(EFL context)
☐ Possible unresponsive learners
☐ Lack a sense of direction & assurance
☐ More time wasted by learners in preparing tasks

A model of well regulated control and freedom

Type: Pair Work

Level: A1-B1 Constraint

Teacher Instruction 1: Fill in only one of the days with your plan for next week

	Student A
Thu	Freedom
Fri	Piano lesson 2-4 pm ———Control
Sat	Freedom
Sun	Freedom

		Student B
Thu	Freedom
Fri	Freedom
Sat	English Club 3 pm	Control
Sun	Freedom	Purpose & element of competition

Teacher Instruction 2: Now invite as many friends as you can to go with you. Anyone who can invite most people will be the most desirable/popular person.

Findings From the Case Study

About my research

- Quasi experimental descriptive
- Two groups of second semester university students enrolled in speaking class
- Control group assigned with tooloosely defined p/w task
- Independent group- well-regulated control and freedom

Well balanced defined teacher fronted task:

What is a task?

"An activity which required learners to arrive at an outcome from given information through some process of thought and which allowed teachers to control and regulate that process was regarded as a task." (Prabhu, 1987:24)

Components of Tasks

The definition of a language learning task requires specification of four components: the goals, the input (linguistic or otherwise), the activities derived from this input, and finally the roles implied for teacher and learners (Nunan 1989, p. 47).

Examples of tasks include:

- Preparing a meal.
- •Ordering food in a restaurant.
- •Making an appointment with a doctor on the phone.
- •Solving a problem.
- •Designing a brochure.
- •Making a list of the qualities of a good husband/wife.

Criteria for tasks in TBLT

1. Meaning

Tasks are language teaching activities where meaning is central. Tasks require learners to produce and understand communicative messages.

2. Gaps

Tasks should involve gaps. There are three types of gaps:

- -Information gap: one person has information that another person does not have.
- -Opinion gap: learners have the same shared information but they use that information to try to convey their feeling about a particular situation.

-Reasoning gap: learners are asked to use reason and logic to decide what information to convey and what resolution to make for the problem at hand. Like information gap, the activity necessarily involves understanding and communicating information. Where the information and reasoning gaps differ is in the information conveyed. The latter is not identical with the one initially understood. It changes through reasoning.

3. Use of learners' own resources

Learners have to use their own linguistic and nonlinguistic resources to complete the task. That is, they have to use whatever knowledge of the language they have in order to participate in the task. Learners may also use nonlinguistic resources such as gestures. This criterion is what makes TBLT unique. In traditional language teaching, the teacher provides the language resources and the students have to master these resources when they do a task.

Typical procedure Pre-task

At this stage, the topic is introduced through activities such as:

- Prior knowledge activation
- Brainstorming
- Visual Aids
- •Games
- Discussions
- Vocabulary activities
- Reading

Task activity (cycle)

The teacher gives clear instructions about the task.

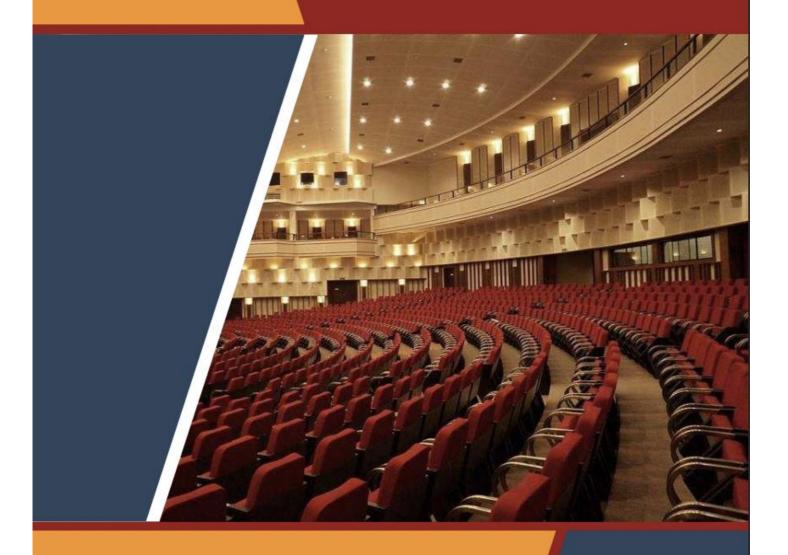

- •The learners do the task, in pairs or in groups, using their own linguistic and nonlinguistic resources.
- •The teacher's role at this stage is to monitor, support, and encourage the learners.
- •The teacher does not have to intervene to correct accuracy mistakes.
- •The emphasis is more on meaningful communication, fluency and confidence building than on accuracy.
- •The learners draft or rehearse what they want to say or write.
- •They report briefly to the whole class to compare findings.

Post-task

This stage provides an opportunity for learners to compare their products with a similar product by a native/ fluent speaker.

- •The learners listen to a recording by a native/fluent speaker.
- •Comparison between the two versions constitutes a chance for learners to learn from their mistakes.
- •Based on the analysis of the learners' products, more work on specific language points may follow

RETHINKING ENGLISH LANGUAGE AND LANGUAGE TEACHING IN POST-PANDEMIC ASIA

THE 9TH INTERNATIONAL LANGUAGE AND LANGUAGE TEACHING CONFERENCE

LLTC 2022

4-5 NOVEMBER, 2022
SANATA DHARMA UNIVERSITY
YOGYAKARTA, INDONESIA

Welcome Address President of Sanata Dharma University

It is my joy and privilege to welcome all of you, distinguished speakers, presenters and participants, who hail from different countries, to the Language and Language Teaching Conference (LLTC), organized by the English Language Education Study Program of Sanata Dharma University. This is a truly international conference, and I find the theme to be particularly engaging, timely and insightful: "Rethinking English Language and Language Teaching in Post-Pandemic Asia." As we know the Pandemic has served as a great disruption that helps transform our life, including the role of language and the dynamics of language teaching.

To begin with, the Pandemic has once again shown the importance of communication and connection. Humanity simply cannot live without communication and connection. We are "connected beings", and would suffer and even "die" without meaningful and sustained connection with other human beings and from the world. So, from the Pandemic, we learn to be more creative in making connection and forging communication.

As Paul Ricoeur, the French philosopher has argued, human beings can only flourish through language. In his view, the farthest distance is the journey into one's own self. Why? Because this journey has to be done through our exposure and immersion to the world of culture and civilizations, especially symbolism and language. In other words, we can only be ourselves, we can only understand who we are, through communication and connection to the larger reality of humanity and history. Ricoeur argues: "Existence becomes a self only by appropriating this meaning which first resides 'outside', in works, institutions and cultural monuments in which the life of the spirit is objectivied." (Ricoeur, The Conflict of Interpretations; Kearney, On Paul Ricoeur: The Owl of Minerva [Routledge, 2004], 28). Again, language, interpretation and communication are indispensable in the formation of every human being.

In this respect, it is insightful to remember the classical dictum: "Humanitas perfecta et eloquens," which means that human being's perfection is deeply related to his or her ability of reflection, expression and communication. This ideal of human being needs to be renewed during the post-pandemic era. We are called once again to be more human, by being able to reflect on, formulate and express our experiences through various forms of communication. It is crucial for us today to tell each other's stories of struggle and meaning.

For, clearly the Pandemic has served as a moment of humanity's reckoning with itself. It reveals the resilience of humanity, its solidarity in the face of dangers and destructions, but also gives rise to existential angst and fear. It brings the best and the worst in people, it brings people together but also breaks the bonds of solidarity and gives rise to a sense of menacing otherness. It reveals the mystery and complexity of being human, both on the individual and societal levels. Language and communication help us go deeper into this mystery and rich experience.

Furthermore, an important part of the complexities and serious problems during the Pandemic was the persistence of hoax and fake news in the framework of political populism and identity politics. In this regard, we are called to fight against this through the power of language as a form of logic. Language has served as a powerful means that facilitates and expresses logical and critical thinking. Proper use of language can unmask false and myopic ideologies and propaganda. This aspect of language, and language teaching, has become more important at the age of post-truth like ours.

Given our situation, we really need a lot of rethinking about language, language teaching and communication in the post-pandemic era. That is why we need to come together for this timely Conference. Since its foundation, Sanata Dharma University has been committed to the full flourishing of humanity, inspired by Christian values, universal humanism, the principle of inclusivity, and ethical commitment to the well-being of our nation. In this respect, the studies of humanities in general (studia humanitatis), as well as humanities as academic programs, have continued to play an important role in our mission today. Literature and language education are embedded in our education here at Sanata Dharma University.

On this note, I wish you all a very stimulating and engaging conversation on this crucial topic of our time. Our gratitude goes to the organizing committee who has worked hard to put together this Conference. God bless us all.

Welcome Address Dean of the Faculty of Teacher Training and Education Sanata Dharma University

Respected keynote speakers, paper presenters and seminar participants, with great pleasure I would like to welcome you to The 9th Language and Language Teaching Conference.

This ninth seminar is held when we are full of optimism in welcoming the return of learning after being hit by the Covid-19 Pandemic for two years.

We have experienced great learning challenges during this pandemic. Yet, the Covid-19 pandemic has encouraged us educators to find creative ways to interact with students to keep on learning and maintain their to continue to grow.

We are grateful for the various technological facilities available around us which have facilitated the emergence of new creativity in learning English in our schools and campuses. We are even more grateful for the dedication of the lecturers and teachers in finding new ways of learning English that make students learn more.

The 9th Language and Language Teaching Conference provides an opportunity for all of us as educators to witness and learn about creative discoveries in English learning made by our colleagues from various places.

I would like to sincerely thank the keynote speakers and paper presenters who will generously share their experiences and knowledge in this seminar. Through sharing experiences and knowledge in this conference we as an academic community learn and grow.

I would also like to appreciate the leadership of the English Language Education study program at Sanata Dharma University and the committee consisting of lecturers and students who have dedicated their time and energy to preparing and managing this seminar.

Finally, I wish you a fruitful seminar, I believe that through this academic encounter we will grow each other's optimism and creativity to improve the quality and meaningful English learning.

Welcome Address

Chairperson of the English Language Education Study Programme (ELESP) Sanata Dharma University

Very warm greetings from the English Language Education Study Programme (ELESP), Sanata Dharma University. I am very grateful to welcome you all to the 9th International Language and Language Teaching Conference (LLTC) 2022 which is done annually by the English Language Education Study Programme, Sanata Dharma University.

In this special occasion, I would like to extend my gratitude to:

- 1. Prof. Stephen D. Krashen from the University of Southern California
- 2. Jeremy P.H. Harmer, M.A. from Anglia Ruskin University
- 3. Dr. Made Frida Yulia from Sanata Dharma University
- 4. Dr. Abdelaziz Benkheddoudja from Ecole Normale Suprieure de Bouzareah
- 5. Assoc Prof. Dr. Behbood Mohammadzadeh from Cyprus International University
- 6. Jorge Correa Rodriguez Ph.D. from Children's Growth Center
- 7. All presenters and participants of this LLTC 2021; and
- 8. The committee, who have been working very hard to prepare, organize and make this conference run well.

This International LLTC has come its way for 9 years and this year conference takes "Rethinking English Language and Language Teaching in Post-Pandemic Asia" as its theme. It is a proper response to the existing condition. The Covid-19 pandemic has been around for more than two years and its emergence resulted in an unfavorable disruption of traditional pedagogical methods in any subjects including English language. The disruption caused by the pandemic has forced us to adjust to the local and universal contexts. Language teaching and learning have been critically altered and teachers throughout the world have come to embrace the practice of internet-enhanced teaching and learning. This situation provides us with ample of opportunities to investigate the efficacy of online language teaching and invites us to think about the right things to do in the post-pandemic era. Reorganization of the education system, teachers' creativity, provision of technological infrastructure and curriculum development are of paramount importance to put into consideration.

I personally see this International LLTC as a moment of getting new perspectives form the experts and respected speakers in order to deal with the new face of English language learning and teaching in the post pandemic. I believe that this conference will be a meaningful sharing moment for everybody participating in this event and can become an academic party for all of us.

Have a fruitful conference. Thank you.

Veronica Triprihatmini, M.Hum., M.A.

Welcome Address

Chairperson of LLTC 2022 Committee

Good morning honorable presenters and participants, ladies and gentlemen,

It is my pleasure to welcome all the participants today for the two-day Language and Language Teaching Conference 2022. I welcome all the eminent speakers and guests from all over the world who have joined us to share their knowledge and vast experience with student community. This conference has more than 100 enthusiastic experts, researchers, and teaching practitioners from 13 different countries.

Our Language and Language Teaching Conference was started in 2013, almost 9 years back, and it was the time when tablets were luxury for many people and flipped learning was gaining its momentum. So, our LLTC conference has been meaningful sharing moments and beneficial for everybody who participates in the events and become an academic party for all of us.

The global pandemic caused by the COVID-19 virus has had a disruptive and profound impact on English-language teaching. To reduce the spread of the virus, teachers and learners had to suspend in-person teaching and learning. This led to the widespread adoption of synchronous and asynchronous online teaching. Obviously, this period has led to immense challenges for teachers and students alike, but it has also provided a unique opportunity to understand the potential affordances of online teaching in Englishlanguage teaching.

Many researchers, linguists and SLA scholars have been developing a variety of innovative methodologies and approaches for effective language teaching and learning process in response to the emergency situation during the pandemic outbreak. This might create new and innovative cultures of learning. Although after a long period of online learning activities, students feel motivated to study online, these students experience social distance as those who are not stimulated to learn online. Moreover, some studies confirm that students consider the online language classes effective, but face-to-face classes cannot be replaced. In this respect teacher's role is irreplaceable. Therefore, educational institutions should invest in supporting them technically, mentally, as well as financially, in this difficult period in order to ensure and provide quality teaching for future generations.

The theme of this conference is "Rethinking English Language and Language Teaching in Post-Pandemic Asia". In this event, LLTC presents six keynote and plenary speakers who are experts in the field of educational technology, second & foreign language pedagogy & instruction, literacy, and curriculum developments. There will be also over 100 interesting presentations for us to get new perspectives from experts, researchers, and teaching practitioners in order to deal with the new face of language learning and teaching, linguistics and literature in local and universal contexts.

We are proud to announce that this conference is being conducted with the cooperation of the Master program of English Language Education and the Master program of English Language Studies. I shall extend my gratitude to all committee members from PBI Sanata Dharma, without whom this conference would not have been possible. I would also like to express a sincere gratitude to all parties who have worked hand in hand to make this conference run well.

To conclude, I sincerely hope this LLTC 2022 would be a place for us to build network, communicating and collaborating ideas for learning and innovation in English language education. Finally, I wish you a great conference ahead. Thank you very much.

Fidelis Chosa Kastuhandani, M.Hum., Ph.D.
