WITH INTERNATIONAL ACCREDITATION"

I. BACKGROUND

Education is the main pillar in the development of a nation, becoming the foundation for creating a superior and quality generation. In facing the dynamics of globalization and increasingly fierce competition, an educational institution needs to evaluate and improve its quality. Accreditation is a strategic effort to guarantee the quality and relevance of educational institutions. In this context, Study Program Accreditation is an important milestone in meeting international accreditation standards.

Accreditation of Study Programs, especially Medical Education, has a crucial role in ensuring that a study program can provide quality education, in accordance with established standards. In line with global demands, educational institutions are required to increase their accreditation achievements to international levels. This is a progressive step in increasing the competitiveness of graduates in the global job market and making educational institutions a center of excellence in the academic world.

Through APKKM (Asosiasi Pendidikan Kedokteran dan Kesehatan Muhammadiyah) - (Muhammadiyah Medical and Health Education Association), educational institutions measure and assess the performance of study programs in various aspects, including curriculum, teaching staff, facilities, research and community service. In this way, educational institutions can identify strengths and weaknesses, and design more effective development strategies.

The importance of international accreditation is not only limited to improving quality, but also strengthening the position of educational institutions, especially those that are members of APKKM as partners in the global network. By gaining international recognition, educational institutions can more easily collaborate with educational institutions and industry in various countries, opening up opportunities for knowledge exchange, joint research and collaborative project development.

In the context of globalization of education, this introduction will discuss the significance of APKKM as a strategic step for educational institutions in welcoming international accreditation. Improving the quality of education will form a generation that is strong, able to compete at the global level, and become agents of change who are able to respond to future challenges.

II. PURPOSES

- a. Increase knowledge regarding international accreditation, especially for APKKM members
- b. Increase motivation for the entire Faculty of Medicine academic community who are members of APKKM to increase the international accreditation achievements of each institution
- c. Strengthen the position of educational institutions, especially those that are members of APKKM, as partners in the global network
